Join an award-winning journalism team making a difference in Canada's Arctic. Nunatsiaq News is the leading news source in the Eastern and is a strong voice in Arctic and Indigenous issues in Canada. Providing credible, in-depth and award-winning journalism, Nunatsiaq News is read by 60,000 people a week in 39 northern communities and across southern Canada.

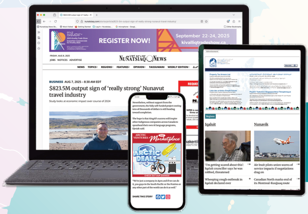
ᓄᓇᑦᓯᐊᕐᒥ ᐱᕙᓪᓕᐊᔪᑦ

NUNATSIAQ NEWS

Web Editor

We are looking for a meticulous editor and writer who is comfortable and experienced working online, in print and with social media. The web editor needs to be an excellent communicator, able to thrive in a dynamic, deadline-driven newsroom, and enjoy working with and mentoring reporters. The successful candidate will be someone who is interested in Canada's Arctic and Indigenous Peoples and the interplay of politics, development and culture that impacts our editorial coverage.

This position is remotely based and offers flexible hours and terms of employment. Nunatsiaq News offers competitive compensation, profit sharing, health benefits and, if based in Nunavut, relocation, housing and travel assistance. Nunatsiaq News wants its team to reflect the communities it covers; Inuit from Nunavut or Nunavik are strongly encouraged to apply.



Please send resumé to Corey Larocque, Managing Editor
coreyl@nunatsiaq.com by Feb. 20, 2026